From the Head of School/CEO

Dear ASA Community,

The Arizona School for the Arts tradition continued to thrive during our 17th year of operation the evidence of which is reflected in this year's Annual Report. During the 2011-2012 school year, ASA achieved three noteworthy milestones. The school: received its first national academic rankings – 12th in Reading Comprehension and 22nd in Math as reported in the Global Report Card (GRC); was recognized with the Governor's Arts Award for an educational organization; and gained stability and sustainability for the future by completing our permanent campus. These accomplishments reflect the pillars of our mission: to offer the highest caliber college preparation and performing arts instruction within a thriving learning community.

While each of these pillars is critical to accomplishing the school's mission, perhaps the most critical and unique is the arts framework upon which ASA is based. As arts programs disappear from public education due to funding cuts and ever-increasing demands for student performance and other data, ASA's success continues to shine a spotlight on the importance of arts instruction. A growing body of research suggests that arts learning supports innovation, creative problem solving; and collaboration (Ruppert, 2006) – the critical skills needed for high wage jobs in the 21st century work force. Infusing arts into the educational environment keeps students in school, motivated to learn, and it builds self-confidence. However, beyond the more intangible evidence, research also shows that active participation in the arts has a direct correlation to academic achievement.

Armed with evidence that all children benefit from active participation in an arts experience, ASA began to expand its impact on the larger community by offering the first ASA Summer Arts Institute on campus. During the month of June over 230 children from within our ASA community and from surrounding schools in the area attended weeklong classes in dance, music, and theatre. Although school enrollment will near its peak in the 2012-2013 school year with 800 students, ASA will continue to expand extra curricular programs like the Summer Arts Institute to increase the availability of high quality arts programs for more children.

As we look forward, I am excited about our school's future opportunities to advance its vision, and confident that our community will continue to recognize the value ASA brings to our city and to our state.

Best Wishes,

Leah Fregulia Roberts
Head of School/CEO

From the Board President

Dear ASA Families,

We are pleased to share this Annual Report with our community and stakeholders. The report chronicles ASA's remarkable accomplishments in the 2012 fiscal year. It exhibits compelling evidence of a school that has established a national reputation for its challenging and stimulating academic program AND a school that supplements and enriches the educational experience of its students through the performing arts. There is no other place like Arizona School for the Arts!

The quality of the student body, the excellence of the faculty and the new enhancements to the campus are all positive indicators of ASA's commitment to quality college preparatory education and the finest instruction in the performing arts. That commitment and those outcomes are being supported by an ever growing network of ASA alumni. ASA has long been an actively engaged partner in the downtown Phoenix community and a vital part of building a vibrant, rich and diverse arts and culture scene here in Arizona, but our breadth of influence is now being spread across the globe as our alumni branch out, make new connections and positively impact their new communities.

For some it might be tempting to rest on our laurels, but at ASA there is a commitment to continuous improvement. As such, recently a group of ASA stakeholders, comprised of board members, administration, faculty, staff, parents and students, gathered together for a strategic planning retreat. The attendees engaged in a discussion to focus the effort of ASA over the next several years. The session provided valuable interaction and a rich harvest of ideas to consider. With the approval of a final plan, the expectation is that all stakeholders represented by the diversity of this gathering will support and participate fully in bringing the vision to life. This is just one example of the forward looking and inclusionary nature of ASA and is why I count it a privilege to be part of such a worthwhile endeavor.

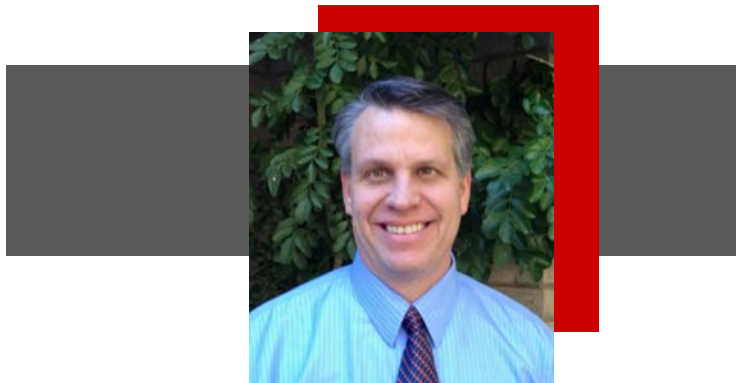

As Theodore Roosevelt said, "Far and away the best prize that life offers is the chance to work hard at work worth doing." Never has there been a more important work than that of educating and preparing the next generation of leaders for the changing world they will occupy. I am confident that ASA is poised to set the bar for education excellence – academics and arts - for years to come.

Best regards,

John

John Snider

Board President

ACADEMICS

ASA focuses on elevating student learning beyond basic test requirements with purposeful, challenging curriculum and opportunities to research, experiment, think critically, collaborate, and create. Both middle school and high school offer required core curriculum in English, Social Studies, Math, and Science. Each year students give an academic presentation to faculty and their parents. The ASA curriculum not only provides the academic foundation students need to be successful in higher education, but those skills needed for leadership and civic engagement in the 21st century.

An average of 96% of graduates pursue post-secondary education and have gained entry to the top universities in the country. Test results consistently reflect the success of ASA's teaching philosophy. With the recent release of the Global Report Card from the George W. Bush Institute, ASA has also gained status as the 12th ranked school in the nation for reading and the 22nd for math.

ARTS

ASA offers extensive training in the areas of Music, Ballet/Dance, and Theatre Arts. All ASA students develop strong foundations in music through required study in piano and voice during the middle school years. In high school, students declare a major area of study by the end of their sophomore year. The school has developed its own on-site music conservatory and Theatre Arts program. The school partners with the School of Ballet Arizona to provide the highest quality performing arts experience in the Valley. ASA had its inaugural Summer Arts Institute where over 230 students from the community participated in a variety of weeklong classes covering all areas of arts performance.

A Glance at ASA 2011-2012

ASA was the recipient of the 2012 Governor's Arts Award in the Arts in Education, Organization category. This award recognizes philanthropy and outstanding efforts of individuals and organizations contributing to the diversity and excellence of Arizona's arts and cultural community.

On April 20, ASA celebrated the opening of new campus buildings and student courtyard with an all-school carnival and open-air concert featuring Phoenix jazz and blues legend, Dennis Rowland, who performed with the ASA Jazz Orchestra. Mayor Greg Stanton gave congratulatory remarks and cited the excelling educational model and rich Downtown Phoenix arts environment provided by ASA.

ASA Students had more than 150 performances in the community. ASA's Percussion Ensemble, Guitar Ensemble, and Willetta Winds (Woodwind quintet) performed in the Musical Instrument Museum as part of their "Museum Encounters" series. Students performed to standing room only crowds in many of the museum galleries. ASA was invited back for the 2012-13 season and has eight ensembles performing during the school year.

ASA welcomed its largest student body to date; educating nearly 800 fifth through twelfth graders.

The Students of ASA

Arizona School for the Arts is an increasingly diverse environment open to all Arizona students. Because more students apply for ASA than can be accommodated, enrollment is conducted through a public lottery process.
