We are all grieving. The pandemic has handed us a long list of losses; from our sense of safety, to our social interactions, to worries about having a predictable future and one's financial security. We are missing day-to-day student interactions, ending the school year with our students, birthday celebrations and graduations, the list goes on and on. Join Dr. Yadira Flores as she leads a workshop on learning about the stages of grief so many of us are experiencing during these unprecedented times. She will teach you how best to establish coping strategies for yourself and identify how to support students and others through the grieving process.
